NEW CHANGES FOR 'OLD-BOY' BFD

After a report found that inappropriate behavior toward women was still rampant in the Boston Fire Department, Mayor Marty Walsh announced the creation of a new cadet program to recruit and train more women into the department. 4

The Boston Fire Department has some housecleaning to do, according to a city-commissioned review of female firefighter safety and comfort. Mayor Marty Walsh hopes a new cadet program aimed at advancing the number of women on the force will put a stop to the "locker room talk," harassment and discrimination. The program would implement new training and conduct measures to raise the chances for women to qualify as candidates. Read more on page 4 or at metroboston.us.

PRESSLEY: BACK PAY FOR LOW-WAGE FED WORKERS

1 U.S. Rep. Ayanna Pressley called out President Donald Trump for "devaluing the life of the immigrant, the worker and the survivor" from the House floor on Tuesday, furthering her efforts to pass legislation which would compensate low-wage federal government contract workers who are not being paid during the partial government shutdown. "Mr. Trump, you took an oath just as I did five days ago, to protect and defend the Constitution and the American people," Pressley said. "Sir, you dishonor that oath." The partial shutdown, which has now lasted for 18 days, "has nothing to do with border security," Pressley said. She called it a crisis that "has brought a tsunami of hurt" for "survivors fleeing violent hands, seeking safety, only to find the shelter door locked and families concerned about feeding their children because their WIC benefits will run dry." Pressley sent a letter to congressional leaders urging them to ensure that "any final funding agreement include retroactive compensation for the thousands of low-wage government contract service workers."

TRUMP GETTING BLAME FOR SHUTDOWN: POLL

2 A growing proportion of Americans blame President Donald Trump for a partial government shutdown that will cut off paychecks to federal workers this week, though Republicans mostly support his refusal to approve a budget without taxpayer dollars for the U.S.-Mexico border wall, according to a Reuters/Ipsos poll released on Tuesday. The national opinion poll, which ran from Jan. 1 to Jan. 7, found that 51 percent of adults believe Trump "deserves most of the blame" for the shutdown, which entered its 18th day on Tuesday. That is up 4 percentage points from a similar poll that ran from Dec. 21 to Dec. 25. Another 32 percent blame congressional Democrats for the shutdown and 7 percent blame congressional Republicans, according to the poll. Those percentages are mostly unchanged from the previous poll. Trump has promised to keep the government partially closed until Congress approves funding for an expanded barrier along the border. Illegal border crossings into the United States have declined dramatically in recent years, yet Trump insists a wall is still necessary to stem a "humanitarian and national security crisis" in the region.

FBI: COLLECTED UP TO 200 'EL CHAPO' CALLS

4 The voice of Joaquin Guzman, the accused Mexican drug lord known as "El Chapo," wafted through a Brooklyn courtroom on Tuesday after an FBI special agent said the agency had intercepted 100 to 200 recorded calls of him after infiltrating his encrypted messaging system. Testimony from the agent, Steven Marston, came nearly two months into the trial of Guzman, which began last Nov. 13 and may last a few more weeks. Guzman, 61, was extradited to the United States in January 2017 to face charges of trafficking huge quantities of cocaine, heroin and other drugs into the United States as the leader of the Sinaloa cartel. Prosecutors have also said Guzman played a central role in a Mexican drug war in which more than 100,000 people have died. Guzman faces life in prison if convicted. Marston said the FBI tapped into more than 800 calls on the encrypted system with the help of a cooperating witness, Christian Rodriguez, with its probe targeting Guzman, Colombian drug trafficking leader Diego Cifuentes and others.

MARGOT ROBBIE TO PLAY BARBIE IN FILM

5 Actress Margot Robbie is to play Barbie in the first live-action feature movie about the iconic and controversial doll, who has enjoyed multiple careers in her 60-year lifetime. Toymaker Mattel and movie studio Warner Bros. on Tuesday announced they were partnering to make the film, which will star the Oscar-nominated actress. Robbie, 28, will also co-produce the film, the companies said in a statement. No plot, title or release date was announced for the film, which comes 60 years after the adult-figured Barbie fashion doll was launched in March 1959. Robbie, who was Oscar-nominated for her starring role in the 2017 ice-skating movie "I, Tonya" and who appeared in the 2016 superhero movie "Suicide Squad," said she hoped the film would "have a tremendously positive impact on children and audiences worldwide." "Barbie has empowered kids to imagine themselves in aspirational roles from a princess to president," the actress said in a statement. Barbie has adopted more than 200 careers in her lifetime, including robotics engineer, astronaut and teacher.

BFD suffers from 'locker room talk,' 'old-boy network': Report

Mayor Walsh announced plans to establish a new Boston Fire Dept. cadet program to curb underrepresentation of female firefighters.

NATE HOMAN
letters@metro.us

ISTOCK

Mayor Marty Walsh announced on Tuesday that he intends to create a new cadet program for the Boston Fire Department to recruit and train more women as part of his overall legislative package.

This announcement comes in the wake of a city-commissioned review of female firefighters, in which he urged officials to increase the number of women in the department and confront unaddressed or improperly handled instances of inappropriate behavior toward women in an "old-boy network" rife with "locker room talk."

The report revealed that "several [women] noted that they did not always feel as welcomed when detailed to houses that did not have a woman regularly assigned. Fire Commissioner Joseph Finn said in a press release. "There is nothing more important to me than the health, safety and well-being of Boston's firefighters, which is why I'm proud of all the work we've been able to accomplish over the last several years."

Walsh commissioned the Stoneman, Chandler, and Miller law firm to conduct an external review examining the culture and environment for female firefighters at the BFD following several instances of discrimination and sexual assault.

While the report showed that "most of the women stated that they loved their jobs and none expressed regret about deciding to become a firefighter," there was a common theme among women on the force feeling uncomfortable and less welcome in firehouses where they weren't regularly assigned.

"There is nothing more important to me than the health, safety and well-being of Boston's firefighters."
Fire Commissioner Joseph Finn

A firefighter told the Boston Globe that a male co-worker once tried to have sex with her against her will while she slept at the station, and spent the night hiding in a locked bathroom in 2009. There were no disciplinary actions taken, and she claimed that few on the force believed her.

"This report makes clear that we have more work to do, and now more than ever I am committed to driving this needed change of embracing a culture of inclusion that will reach every corner of every firehouse," Finn said in a statement.

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, four percent of firefighters nationwide are females. Boston currently has 16 female firefighters on a force of about 1,500.

The 54 new recruits sworn in last week marked the most diverse class since 2003, consisting of seven Asian, seven Hispanic and six black recruits. At the same time, the class consisted of 53 males and one female (BFD's first Asian-American female). The first female firefighter joined the BFD in 1984, and only one has achieved the rank of captain.

Winter is here: 'Game of Thrones'-inspired pop-up bar returns

2019 is shaping up to be a great year for "Game of Thrones" fans. Not only is the eighth and final season set to premiere on HBO this spring, but a pop-up "Game of Thrones" bar will once again set up shop in Boston, just in time for winter's arrival.

After a successful debut in 2018, The Patio at Precinct Kitchen + Bar is bringing back its popular pop-up inspired by the hit fantasy series. The "Game of Thrones" bar will return to the Back Bay hot spot with all kinds of goodies fit for a Lannister, beginning Friday, Jan. 11.

This time around, guests can expect the outdoor space at Precinct to be transformed into three spaces that represent the famous families of Westeros, which of course includes the Starks, the Lannisters and the Targaryens. Chill outside while wearing a (faux) fur like Jon Snow, or head indoors to relive the infamous Red Wedding. Don't worry about betrayals, though, as no one is going to end up like Robb and Catelyn Stark.

In addition to the festive decor, the pop-up "Game of Thrones" bar will feature a number of food and drink specials that are fit for everyone from Ser Gregor Clegane to Tyrion Lannister.

Drink like a Lannister once more.
PRECINCT KITCHEN + BAR

Feast on a 32 oz. tomahawk ribeye steak for two — appropriately dubbed "The Mountain" — served with grilled white asparagus, fondant potatoes and red chimichurri. Channel your inner Khaleesi and order up a Dracarys flaming cocktail, made with Flor de Cana rum 4 year, lime juice, simple syrup and muddled dragon fruit.

Aside from all the food and drinks, guests can also book a special overnight stay at the Loews Hotel, which is offering a Night King package featuring themed decor, drinks in specialty mugs and glasses, plus (faux) fur robe so you can rule over your kingdom in style. The package will be available to book from the beginning of the pop-up on Jan. 11 through Feb. 2, for $359 per night.

Say 'Ciao!' to the best pizza in Massachusetts

A local pizzeria made Yelp's Top 100 Places to Eat in the U.S. list for 2019. GETTY IMAGES

Pizza-lovers unite! Yelp is answering the age-old question: Which is the best pizza in Massachusetts?

We have long awaited a response to our pizza prayers, but worry not, because Yelp is answering us. Yelp is releasing its Top 100 Places to Eat in the U.S. for 2019, and the list features Chelsea-based pizzeria Ciao! Pizza & Pasta as No. 3 on its rankings of the best restaurants across the country.

For those who are unaware, Yelp is the popular crowd-sourced search engine for restaurants. By using reviews, star ratings and other information collected from customers, restaurants get an overall evaluation that influences whether incoming consumers will risk their time and money. For the past six years, Yelp has released an annual list of its Top 100 restaurants in the nation by examining both the sum of ratings and the volume of reviews for a business, as well as considering the number of reviews in the given area, so as to not disadvantage the businesses located in places with less foot traffic.

Ciao! first debuted on the list in 2017 at No. 8, but this is its first year in the top three. As the only restaurant in Massachusetts to make the list this year, many curious people may wonder: Why is it the best pizza in Massachusetts? A mere 15 to 20 minutes outside of Boston, Ciao! is open from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. every day except Sunday.

Yelp's "Popular Dishes" feature allows customers to see top reviews for dishes like the Funghi pizza, the Pollo Arrosto pizza and even a Nutella pizza. The pies range from $11-$14, a pretty standard price around Boston, according to Forbes' Pizza Price Index. Although the restaurant serves pasta like many Italian eateries, most reviews boast of the phenomenal pizza.

Regardless of the multitudes of boastful reviewers, the only way to find out if Ciao! is truly the best pizza in Massachusetts is to try it yourself. Go forth and eat pizza!

It's the end of the road for the hit FXX series. ALL PHOTOS FXX

Aya Cash and Chris Geere say goodbye to 'You're the Worst'

The stars open up about saying goodbye to the popular comedy series.

ANDREW HUSBAND
drew.husband@metro.us

This week, the fifth and final season of FXX's critically acclaimed comedy series "You're the Worst" will premiere.

For the sake of avoiding any and all spoilers, let's just say that creator Stephen Falk has found a uniquely odd (but appropriate) way to kick off the beginning of the end. At least that's what stars Aya Cash and Chris Geere told Metro while promoting "You're the Worst" season 5.

"I never used to enjoy doing standalone episodes because I didn't know how they were going to turn out," admits Geere, who plays Jimmy Shive-Overly. "But there was so much trust invested in Stephen. Anything he throws at us is going to work. It all comes from a great place. So when we were filming this episode, in particular, Aya and I used to look at each other and go, 'Is this our show? What are we doing?'"

Despite the season 5 premiere's eclectic approach to picking up where season 4 left off, the pair is excited for audiences to see what happens during the next few months. Unsurprisingly, they're also a bit sad about the whole affair, for once the 13th episode comes to a conclusion, that will be it for the show.

"Yeah, I'm sad, but I'm also excited for everybody to see it," says Cash, who plays Gretchen Cutler. "You never know how people are going to react, but when I read [the episode scripts], I was like, 'Oh, this feels right.' So I'm excited to share them with everybody but totally devastated that it's over now."

As somber as the occasion is, both Cash and Geere agree that, when working in a long-form entertainment format like television, knowing just how much story there is left to tell is a good place to be. After all, the "You're the Worst" team knew going into season 5 that it would be the show's last. In that way, they would all get to tell the story they wanted to tell, and how they wanted to tell it.

"It's so much better," says Cash. "It's so much more civilized to be able to end a series on your own terms and close out the story. If we had just ended after any random season, I think we'd all be wondering what happened. But now, we get to really say goodbye and pay our respects to the series."

"It's rare to know so far in advance that you're going to get another season, let alone actually know that it's ending," adds Geere. "To get five seasons is a huge accomplishment in our current climate. We're upset we didn't get that movie because that would have been so much fun, but 'You're the Worst' has been, and will always be, a sleeper show. The fans seem to keep building over time. The numbers seem to keep growing as we go on. As a TV viewer, if I know that I can watch the entirety of something on a streaming service, that's great. I like that. People like to have a beginning, middle and end, and we most definitely have that."

Of course, this doesn't mean that Cash and Geere won't be doing anything else anytime soon. The British actor briefly comments on his role in the Ryan Reynolds-starring "Detective Pikachu" movie: "I just spent four months on that, which was all green screen," he joked.

Cash, meanwhile, will next be seen in FX's upcoming miniseries "Fosse/Verdon," in which she plays Joan Simon, the wife of playwright Neil Simon. "That was super fun and I have a great wig," she says of the experience. "That's my spoiler alert."

"You're the Worst" season 5 premieres tonight at 10 p.m. on FXX.

Is the Patriots offense broken?

Some folks are concerned with Tom Brady and Co. heading into the Divisional Round.

JIMMY TOSCANO
sports@metro.us

They ranked fifth in total offense, fifth in rushing, eighth in passing, and fourth in points per game.

But if you ask certain Patriots fans, they'll tell you something's up with the Patriots offense.

They'll tell you Tom Brady has had a down year, he looks old.

They'll tell you Rob Gronkowski is a shell of himself, he's just a decoy now.

They'll tell you Chris Hogan played lacrosse in college, but right after that, they tell you he's been invisible this year.

So, are these fans wrong, then?

It's not that easy of an answer. The truth is the Patriots have at times looked really good on offense, and at other times looked really off. Anybody who saw them against the Titans and then the Chiefs knows just as much.

The Patriots are a "game plan" team more than most teams in the NFL. Their strategy one game will not look like the next game. Case in point: Against the Bills in Week 16, Brady threw just 24 passes for 126 yards and the Patriots ran the ball a whopping 45 times for 275 yards. You don't see that often — and you certainly won't see it Sunday against the Chargers.

That said, Brady has been off at points this season, and there is no doubting Gronkowski looks a step (or two) slow out there. They have relied on the run at times, with mixed results.

On Sunday, the offense will need to play its best game of the year, because the Chargers have the pieces to make this the most difficult remaining playoff matchup for the Patriots offense.

Tom Brady and the Pats have been inconsistent down the stretch. REUTERS

It starts on the defensive line, where Joey Bosa and Melvin Ingram cause fits for opposing quarterbacks and running backs. We also see linebacker Uchenna Nwosu in on the action, among others.

This D-line is going to force Brady into a lot of quick releases.

But is that such a bad thing?

Brady is probably still the smartest quarterback in this league, and while a rookie like Lamar Jackson could get flustered by the pressure, Brady has been there and done that. He needs to act quickly and not bail out to avoid oncoming pressure (remember Pittsburgh?).

Brady may not have the time — or, quite frankly, the weapons — to go deep against the Chargers, but decision-making is where Brady thrives and if that means playing it safe to march down the field, then so be it. They've dinked and dunked their way to the Super Bowl before.

And that's where a player like James White comes in. White was looked upon heavily to begin the year, but his impact lessened the final seven games.

In last year's game against the Chargers, though, White finished with five receptions for 85 yards. The Patriots could very well go back to him this Sunday.

"He does a lot for a football team and he certainly does a lot for us offensively and there's a lot of hats that he wears and again, excited to have an opportunity to coach him this week in this game," Josh McDaniels said of White.

The Chargers will watch the same game film as the Patriots, so simply replicating last year's game plan obviously won't work. But the point is that New England should utilize their backs to counteract the pressure that is bound to come to Brady on Sunday.

Right now, doctors at SkinCare Physicians in Chestnut Hill are seeking participants (ages 2 or older) for a new clinical research study. The study is for a new topical solution (applied twice weekly) for common warts – which can appear in many places on the body, often on the fingers, hands, elbows, or knees.

If you participate, you or your child will receive study-related care at no cost, and compensation for you time and travel to attend study visits.

Aries Think about how best to use your time and skills to benefit yourself and others. Keep your plans secret until you have eliminated any flaws.

Taurus Soak up knowledge, information and experience. You will gain insight and confidence through the connections you make and the information you gather.

Gemini Look for opportunities, but don't believe everything someone tells you. If a project or product interests you, do some serious research and see where it takes you.

Cancer If you feel the urge to do something, look into it. Take a unique step in a new direction and invite someone you know and trust to join you.

Leo Get moving. You'll have the energy and wherewithal to make changes you've long been contemplating. Stop spinning your wheels and take the plunge. Romance is highlighted.

Virgo Group endeavors will be good for you. The information you pick up and the people you meet will open your eyes to what's available. A networking event is favored.

Libra Tread carefully when dealing with home, family and domestic concerns. You can't put a price on love, but loyalty and honesty will go part and parcel with keeping the peace.

Scorpio Attending a reunion or getting together with someone you haven't seen in a long time will spark memories and lead to plans. A unique change at home will give you a boost.

Sagittarius Change begins within. Do your best to offer love and compassion to friends and family, but don't let anyone take advantage of you. Romance is in the stars.

Capricorn Keep an open mind when dealing with others, but don't let anyone take you for granted. Offer suggestions, your services or your time, but not cash. Focus on helping yourself.

Aquarius It's OK to change your mind. As long as you are honest about your thoughts and plans, you should feel no guilt for following your own path.

Pisces Cover your bases when helping others. Don't be gullible. Pay attention to the root of a problem and focus on how best to make a difference. EUGENIA LAST
